MORE ABOUT THE HOLMES 96

With 96± acres, there is plenty of space to get out and enjoy the outdoors. There are two ponds stocked with bream, bass, and catfish. There is a 10± acre area of former pasture ground that has a variety of native grasses, young and mature timber, and some fencing that still remains in places. This area would be ideal to reclaim back into pasture ground or manage for wildlife habitat and additional recreational use. The remaining acreage is a mixture of mature hardwoods and pines, featuring rolling hills, flat ground, gravel and sandy creek bottoms, and more. The variety of habitat that exists helps support a healthy population of whitetail deer, wild turkey, and other small game.

Located just 12.8± miles northeast of Lexington and 75.3± miles northeast of Jackson, the Holmes 96 offers convenient access while at the same time maintaining a level of privacy often sought after in properties such as this one. With its combination of acreage, mature hardwoods, pastureland, pond access, and hunting opportunities, the Holmes 96 is perfect for a full-time country home, family retreat, or recreational property.
