Some properties offer one or two standout features. This one brings everything together. The Williams Estate is a rare North Central Oklahoma offering that combines distinctive architecture, recreational water, functional improvements, and mineral ownership in a single, cohesive property. At the center sits a 4,498± square foot Mid-Century Modern home, designed with Wright-Inspired Prairie influences that emphasize natural light, open space, and connection to the surrounding landscape. Expansive glass, a central atrium, and a private courtyard with in-ground pool create a layout that is both striking and highly livable.

Just beyond the home, a 6.5± acre stocked pond with dock provides a true focal point—offering fishing, recreation, and exceptional Oklahoma sunset views. The setting delivers both privacy and a sense of scale that is increasingly difficult to find.

For equestrian or hobby use, the property includes a well-maintained 5-stall horse barn with tack room and wash bay, supported by usable acreage and perimeter fencing.

What further distinguishes this property is the inclusion of mineral rights, an uncommon feature in the area that adds an additional layer of long-term value and ownership.

Properties that successfully combine home, land, water, improvements, and minerals in one package are rare. Opportunities to purchase them at auction are even more uncommon.
